I am developing a web application, whose main functionality is including generating dynamic HTML to display a user interface. I want to monitor the situation, that comes after every request. If request is processed, ok, if not, error. It is easy to monitor global requests (request.isClientConnected()) but how can I monitor every request made by my application? Is there any framework or solution for this? Do I need to implement a custom solution in Java? A: I have solved my problem with in the following way: I have created a thread in the main class with following function: class WorkerThread extends Thread { public WorkerThread(String name) { super(name); } @Override public void run() { try { ServerListener.getInstance().listen(); } catch (JMXServiceException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } catch (IOException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } } } And the code for listening is: private void listen() { ServerSocket serverSocket = null; try { serverSocket = new ServerSocket(SERVICE_PORT); } catch (IOException e) { e.printStackTrace(); } while (true) { if (serverSocket != null) { new Thread work with or without donation, I will not help for any reason in Mod Informer unless they ask me, And I'm not telling you to do this (thats not my intention, and not what this tutorial is about). Ok here is the wp_api Now I did one thing, I check today's date, and this is the new version, so i was surprised, cause i use this url from 3 years ago. I find this link from your url, I googled this code, i find php.net And here is php.net Now i compare my code with this code, i noticed that this code has the same thing but with wp_api in it. Now we have our own wp_api Now let's Add Extra Code and Expand Code Now i add some extra code that's it. If you didn't read the tutorial, Then read it again. Read it carefully. And i'm telling you again to read the tutorial, cause it's not just a tutorial to make you look smart, its just a tutorial that will teach you what to do and how to do it, You have to use some brains. So now your code is ready Now here comes the tricky part, i can't explain it with words, i need to type a lot and show you in a picture, It will be hard to explain, but i will try i will try but if something gets lost, then i'm sorry it's the best i can do. now you can test your code and download it from here Now the last thing you must be doing, is to create a wordpress database with auto install. So here comes the to the next step Now you must download wordpress auto install Database So now you have an auto install database that i created for you. Now download the database from here. Keep in mind it will just be wordpress. No mysql. This will not be a big file. We are almost there, just one last steps, and your wordpress auto install ready. Now copy the path of the database ( name, password, user name ) Make the wordpress auto install run ( this will be done by you, i cannot do it for you ) Now once the files have been
