Roblox is an online game platform and game creation system developed by Roblox Corporation that allows users to program games and play games created by other users. Created by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel in 2004 and released in 2006, the platform hosts user-created games of multiple genres coded in the programming language Lua. For most of Roblox's history, it was relatively small, both as a platform and a company. Roblox began to grow rapidly in the second half of the 2010s, and this growth has been accelerated by the COVID-19 pandemic. Roblox is free to play, with in-game purchases available through a virtual currency called Robux. As of August 2020, Roblox had over 164 million monthly active users, including more than half of all American children under 16. Although Roblox has received generally positive reviews from critics, it has faced criticism for its moderation, microtransactions, and exploitative practices directed toward children.

Roblox Corporation History: Roblox was founded in 2004 by David Baszucki and Erik Cassel. Although the core feature of Roblox was originally developed for use in the game Roblox Star Trek, the company has since added new features such as Adventure Time and Chica's Room. Cassel has since left the company and multiple employees have moved on to Foundry 42. The company is headquartered in San Mateo, California.

Foundry 42: Foundry 42 is a video game company founded by Eric Hasert and David Braben in March 2013. It was established to produce Elite: Dangerous by Frontier Developments. Elite: Dangerous: Elite is a space simulation video game developed by Frontier Developments and published by Frontier Communications. It was released for Microsoft Windows and OS X on December 12, 2014. Frontier Developments: Frontier Developments is a video game developer based in London and founded by Eric Hasert and David Braben. It was established to develop Elite: Dangerous by original Elite: Dangerous developers Frontier Developments in 2012.

David Braben: David Braben is an English video game developer and writer. He co-founded Frontier Developments in 1992, and is the founder and CEO of Frontier and Chair of the Game Developers' Association. Braben has won numerous awards for his games, including the Edge Award for the Best Story, and the BAFTA

The ability of canine and human neutrophils to stimulate fibroblasts was examined. Human neutrophils cause increased fibroblast incorporation of (3H)-leucine into cell proteins. At a ratio of 15:1, human neutrophils increase fibroblast protein synthesis approximately fourfold. The increase in protein synthesis can be abolished if neutrophils are removed from the neutrophil-fibroblast mixture before addition of the neutrophils to the fibroblasts. As little as one canine neutrophil is capable of causing a similar four- to fivefold stimulation of fibroblast protein synthesis. This fibroblast stimulatory activity is unaffected by anti-leukocytic antiserum. In contrast to neutrophils, the percent of mitomycin C-treated canine neutrophils capable of stimulating fibroblast protein synthesis is approximately 15% of the non-treated neutrophils. A sixfold increase in fibroblast protein synthesis occurred in neutrophils which had been preincubated with 10^{-6} M interleukin 1 for 90 minutes. In addition, neutrophils which had been preincubated with 10^{-7} M interleukin 1 to 10^{-8} M interleukin 1 increased fibroblast protein synthesis 100-1000% above non-treated control levels. Human neutrophils fail to stimulate canine fibroblast protein synthesis. One possible explanation for the ability of canine neutrophils to stimulate fibroblast protein synthesis is the presence of an inhibitor of human neutrophil fibroblast stimulating activity which is active against canine neutrophils. A second explanation is that canine neutrophils possess receptors for interleukin 1 which may be able to sensitize the cells to interleukin 1 without the need for a second activator.
