I'm making a chat application and now I'm facing a weird problem. The first time a user logs in the text field in the page is prefilled with a value of the username. But the next time the same user logs in I want to prefill the text with the new message. But I want to check, with the new message, if the message was generated by PHP or by type of SQL query. For example if a user wants to send the message in the chat he will type "Hi" in the textfield and in the second time he will type "How are you?". The PHP script will parse and fill the text field with "Hi How are you?" But I want to know if it was generated by PHP or by SQL query. Is there any way to find out if the last message was generated by PHP or by SQL query? I'm using PHP and PDO. A: You could look at the PHP_AUTH_USER and PHP_AUTH_PW variables. Anaesthetist's safety (Manaen). Medical negligence is the failure of a health professional to exercise the requisite degree of skill and knowledge and to act in accordance with best practice. Most sufferers of malpractice will be experts in their respective subject, so they are in a good position to spot inadequacies in the behaviour of the health professional. The anaesthetist is no exception.

Anaesthetists can be involved with the delayed detection of an infection. Anaesthetists' attention to their patients is a valuable resource and the cause of many errors.
