The problem is that I am a bit confused as how to pass the file-paths as an input to the python function. For example, With what should my output_paths be like? The file_paths could be like this, /mnt/fat/path/file_path_1.xml /mnt/fat/path/file_path_2.xml /mnt/fat/path/file_path_3.xml The Python code will be in the filesystem in which I run the job, so the path is known. The data to be loaded is around 100 GB, and to write the files I intend to use Apache Beam. A: No need to use file_paths. Just pass the RDBMS data stream to the PTransform and let PTransform deal with determining the file_paths. Also, look into the RowFilterSpec and the SinkSpec. If you must work directly with file_paths, then use Source.file. Each element of the file_paths list becomes the name of a file that is written.
